THE WAR IN THE SOUTHWEST.

OFFICIAL DISPATCH FROM GEN. CURTIS.

A SKETCH OF GEN. BLUNT.

HEADQUARTERS, St. Louis, Dec. 30, 1862.

Maj.-Gen. H. W. Halleck, General-in-Chief, Washington:

The Army of the Frontier, under Gens. BLUNT and Herron, moved over the Boston Mountains on Sunday day, and advanced without halting to Van Buren. The day on the cavalry carried the Arkansas River, killed and wounded a few, and took three steamboats, some camp equipage, and one hundred prisoners. The march of forty-five miles, with arms and service, over the mountains and through the deep mud of the Valley, was a most gallant and arduous affair.

S. R. CURTIS, Major-General.

WHO IS GEN. BLUNT?

Our correspondent at Fort Scott, Kansas, sends us the following sketch of this hero of the Southwest:

"Perhaps a word or two as to Gen. BLUNT's personal, physical and mental characteristics, may not be uninteresting to your readers. As he will undoubtedly be better known hereafter, for his fighting qualities, many persons will like to know something o one even now noteworthy.

JAMES G. BLUNT is a native of Maine. In his youth and early manhood he followed the sea, and for some time was captain and owner of a vessel. Having received a liberal education, he soon commenced the study of medicine, and removed to Columbus, Ohio, where he was for several years a successful practitioner. In Ohio he was identified in politics successively with the old Liberty Party, the Free-Soilers and Republicans. His brother-in-law, Dr. GILPATRICK, was owing the first and most active Free-State settlers in Southern Kansas. Gen. BLUNT naturally, by sympathy and circumstances, had his attention turned to our State, and emigrated hitherward in the Fall of '56, when he settled in Anderson County. From the first he was identified with the Anti-Slavery wing of the Free State Party. He was chosen delegate to several party Conventions, and elected in 1859 to a seat in the Constitutional Convention which met at Wyandot, and framed the instrument under which Kansas was admitted into the Union. In that body he was among its most active members, and distinguished himself by unceasing labor, and by his willingness to serve otherwise to his own politic, even at the expense of being called "unlish." He is no hand in debate as his telegrams show him to be in dealing with the rebels. During the last movements of Old John Brown in Kansas, when, during the Winter of 1858-59, he went into Missouri and brought out as prisoner to freedom eleven slaves, it was at the house of Dr. BLUNT that the old man, his men, and his freed slaves were sheltered for several weeks, until it was judged best to move North with them. At the breaking out of the war, Dr. BLUNT enlisted in the Third Regiment, (Col. JAMES MONTGOMERY,) and was elected his Lieutenant-Colonel. He was at the battle of Drywood, made a bold and dashing raid into the Indian Territory, after a guerrilla gang under the traitor MATHEWS, (which sacked and burned the town of Humboldt,) killing the leader and twelve of the gang, and recapturing a large amount of stolen property. Col. BLUNT was with Gen. LANE through the whole of his campaign in Missouri. In March last he was made Brigadier-General, and immediately afterward placed in command of the Department of Kansas. The appointment was not a popular one, for it was supposed to have been the work of our military Senator, to prevent the success of other and apparently more distinguished officers. So Gen. BLUNT entered upon his duties with no strong recommendation in his favor, but some against him. He also had an unpleasant duty to cleanse in the administrative detail. The Hunter-LANE imbroglio had left its effects in want of confidence and general disgust, which the pro-slavery intrigues and outrages of DENVER and STANTON only strengthened and complicated. It must be acknowledged that Gen. BLUNT's administration was a complete success. The field operations which he directed in the Indian country, owing to the quarrels among officers, were in some extent a failure, the expedition having retreated to Fort Scott. It numbered not more than 4,000 men, but in spite of all difficulties had succeeded in reaching the Arkansas River, two hundred miles, through a country to a considerable extent destitute of supplies. During its march it defeated and dispersed the entire rebel Indian force, Creek and Cherokee, Col. DREW, who with about 1,200 men had been forced into the Confederate service, came over to the Federal flag, and he and his men now compose the best organized and most valuable of our Indian regiments, under the able leadership of Col. WM. A. PHILLIPS—some $30,000 was taken, a large quantity of horses, cattle, etc., and JOHN ROSS, President of the Cherokee Nation, with all the archives, captured. Since Gen. BLUNT assumed command of his little army, his career is well known.

Gen. BLUNT is now about forty-five years of age. He is about five feet eight or nine inches in height, and possesses a remarkably stalwart frame. Broad-shouldered, deep-chested, sturdy-limbed, his physique is that of an athlete. His head is large, with enormous perceptives, and deep-set eyes of hazel gray, overhung by jet-black brows. He reminds one of a sturdy, hardy, wide-awake, surly when occasion seems to require, quick to bite, not over ready to bark, eager to fight when quarrels present themselves, and with a thorough pertinacity and stick-to-it when aroused. Gen. BLUNT has a heavy head of dark brown hair, and a thick, full beard of the same color. His features express all I have before spoken of, with an added expression of indomitable will, mental acumen, ready common sense and sagacity. His bumpology would carry out this description emphatically. He has very large perceptives, large causality, constructiveness, comparison, sublimity, little reverence, large hope, very large firmness, self-esteem, secretiveness, concentrativeness, adhesiveness and amativeness. In speech, in manners, in dress, as well as in name, the Kansas commander is BLUNT all over. He hits mentally as he would hit physically—a good hard blow from the shoulder; in fine, a man who believes in himself, his ideas, likes the good things of life, hates his enemies, loves his friends, and has brains enough to see and appreciate an opportunity, and ambition as well as patriotism enough to accept and succeed in the career opening before him.

He presents many traits like those of the sturdy old Prussian BLUCHER, whom his men and history have nicknamed "Marshal Forward." Minus the puritanical twang, Gen. BLUNT has an antitype in Cromwell's General, IRETON, the butcher. The "boys" like the rude speech, dash, vim and courage of BLUNT, and many a good story is retailed of him over the camp-fires. At the interview with Gens. HERRON and MARMADUKE, after the battle of Prairie Grove, BLUNT was ready and brusque. HERRON asked for an armistice of 30 hours, which BLUNT peremptorily refused, adding that he "would fight the whole rebel army with his Kansas regiments, in ten minutes, if he wanted." Gen. HERRON remarked that if his army was whipped, he (HERRON) was not, to which came the blunt reply, "Well, pull off your linen, then, and you will see a Major-General whipped in less than five minutes." Having succeeded, by falsehood, and obtained an armistice of 10 hours, the rebel then left in confusion, probably consoling himself that at least BLUNT was a veritable specimen of the Northern mudsills.

NEW-MADRID REOCCUPIED.

CAIRO, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

New-Madrid is to be reoccupied. The Thirty-eighth Iowa went there to-day. All is quiet at Columbus.

THE MISSISSIPPI EXPEDITION.

From the Chicago Post, Dec. 27.

The "Mississippi Expedition," about which so much has been said and so little known, is already on the way, or perhaps by this time has arrived at its destination. Its commanding officer is not Gen. McCLERNAND, but Gen. STEELE. We mention this subject has been all along to keep the name of Gen. McCLERNAND prominent as the organizer of this expedition at Cairo, for a strategic purpose, while the expedition was, in fact, getting ready at and moving from a different point.

The Mississippi expedition is of a much more formidable character than is generally supposed. Its organization embraces three grand divisions, of which Gen. A. J. SMITH's is the right, Gen. MOREAU L. SMITH's the centre, and Gen. GRENVILLE M. DODGE's the left. The number of troops embraced in these corps we, of course, cannot state; but it may be relied upon that it will require a rebel force of not less than fifty or sixty thousand men to make anything like successful opposition.

The composition of this army is entirely Northwestern, our own State having therein no small representation. In Gen. M. L. SMITH's Division are BARRETT's, WOOD's, COLBY's and HART's Chicago batteries; the Fifty-fifth, One Hundred and Twenty-seventh, One Hundred and Sixteenth and One Hundred and Thirteenth Illinois Infantry; the Sixth and Eighth Missouri Infantry, etc. Illinois regiments are also found in each of the other divisions.

In addition to and independent of this expedition is an army, said to number thirty thousand men, at Helena, Arkansas, under Gen. STEELE. That army, as we see by the recent order for transports, is also about to move, if it is not already in motion. What part in the grand drama of war in the Southwest this army is destined to perform will not long remain secret.

THE REBELS IN KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, Tuesday, Dec. 30—10:05 P. M.

Col. HARLAN attacked MORGAN at Rolling Fork, yesterday morning. The engagement lasted an hour and a half. HARLAN killed and wounded a number of rebels, losing two killed and three wounded. Among the latter was Lieut. PALLIS, of SOUTHWICK's Battery, since dead. The rebels retreated toward Bardstown, having lost several killed and wounded, and a Captain and six privates captured. MORGAN spent last night at Bardstown, and moved eastward on the Springfield turnpike. This morning scouts report that Basil DUKE was seriously wounded at Rolling Fork.

A messenger reported to HARLAN that our forces had an engagement at New Haven this morning, and repulsed the rebel there. Shepardsville and Rolling Fork bridges are safe.

The trestle-work on Muldraugh's Hill is so seriously damaged that it will require a month for its restoration. Two small bridges, which can be easily restored, were burned by the rebels near Lebanon Junction.

The above comprises all the damage done by the rebels to bridges on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad and its tributaries.

ADVANCE OF GEN. ROSECRANS.

A BATTLE AT MURFREESBORO, TENN.

LOUISVILLE, Tuesday, Dec. 30—10:05 P. M.

Gen. ROSECRANS captured several cannon on his approach to Murfreesboro, and reports from below indicate an engagement progressing at that place.

To Consignees of California Gold.

NO. 5 BOWLING GREEN, Tuesday, Dec. 30, 1862.

By telegraphic dispatch, received this day, from Hon. GIDEON WELLES, Secretary of the Navy, I am advised that a convoy for each of the homeward bound steamers of the California line has been promptly ordered, in accordance with the proposition which had been submitted to the Government by me; and I have no doubt that the security thus amply provided will be entirely satisfactory to parties immediately interested, and that it will meet with the approbation of the public generally.

C. VANDERBILT.

Naval.

THE IRON-CLAD FRIGATE ROANOKE.

The work on this splendid ship is now rapidly drawing to a close, and in a few weeks she will be the bearer of the heaviest armament of any vessel in the world. Yesterday two more of her immense guns were brought to the Brooklyn Navy Yard by the derrick. The entire six with which she is to be armed will weigh over 120 tons, without carriages. One solitary discharge of her broadside will throw 2,700 lbs. of iron, or more than the entire discharge of a broadside from an old-fashioned 80 gun line-of-battle ship. Nor are here attributes for offensive warware her only ones. The iron on her sides is in solid plates, the perforation of which seems utterly impossible. The proprietors of the Novelty Iron Works have finished their work in the best manner. Capt. S. C. ROWAN, one of the most competent officers in the United States Navy, has been specially selected to command this great ship. The locality in which the Roanoke will be permanently stationed is not as yet definitely fixed. It is said she will have a fine band on board, and be moored off the Battery, where a United States man-of-war is badly wanted to represent our navy. Another rumor is that she will be the flagship of a fleet of harbor batteries devoted to the protection of New-York, Boston and Philadelphia, and that she will make short cruises to sea, but nothing is certain as yet about her future movements, save that New-York will be her headquarters.

Personal.

Brig.-Gen. Dwight and Staff leave the Brevoort House to-day, en route to Fortress Monroe. The General, after his arrival at the Fortress, will assume command of the troops remaining at that place belonging to the Banks Expedition.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Further Particulars Regarding Stuart's Attack on Dumfries.

A Fight of Six Hours' Duration.

THE REBELS HANDSOMELY REPULSED.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

The TIMES' special correspondent with Gen. Stuart's Corps sends to-day some additional and interesting facts relative to the attack at Dumfries by STUART.

On Saturday last STUART crossed the Rappahannock at Kelly's Ford, about six miles east of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, with six thousand men and six pieces of artillery. He proceeded to Stafford Church, where he divided his force into three columns, each having two pieces of artillery, and thus formed marched upon Dumfries, where he arrived at about 11 o'clock A. M. Taking a position on the hills commanding the town, he commenced throwing shells, and succeeded in demolishing the building lately occupied by Gen. STUART and several other houses. The place was occupied by three regiments of infantry, four hundred cavalry and two pieces of artillery of Gen. SLOCUM's Corps, and under the immediate command of Col. CARNY. The fight lasted about six hours, when the rebels retired defeated. Our loss was four men killed and eight wounded; the rebels, so far as known, had ten men killed and sixteen wounded.

Thirty rebel soldiers were captured, and they captured twenty of our cavalry before reaching Dumfries, who were out patrolling. The Union troops acted in the most gallant manner.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE ARMY.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

Intelligence from Alexandria represents that STUART's cavalry force, with artillery, were, yesterday, encamped twelve miles from that city, not far from Burke's Station, on the line of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad.

A telegram from headquarters Army of the Potomac says matters continue quiet on the Rappahannock.

LETTER FROM FAIRFAX STATION.

A Raid by STUART—He Attempts to Capture the Army Depot at Fairfax Station, but Fails—Driven in the Pickets at Fairfax Court-house—He is Repulsed.

FAIRFAX STATION, Va., Monday, Dec. 29, 1862.

Yesterday morning the telegraph informed us that the rebel Gen. STUART, with a large force of cavalry and several pieces of artillery, had made a demonstration at Dumfries, and we were not surprised, therefore, when the telegraph operator at Burke's Station last evening sent word over the wires that STUART was within three miles of that point. It was easily surmised, that with so large a force at his heels, STUART had some other object in view than the mere capturing and destroying property at ordinary posts, and the conclusion was inevitable that his special mission was to capture the large quantity of army supplies at this depôt. Gen. CARNY, whose troops occupy this department, was duly notified of the approach of STUART, and he promptly had the necessary reinforcements sent to this place, and preparations were made elsewhere to give the enemy a warm reception. With his usual acuteness, STUART first marched upon Burke's Station, where there were no troops, and capturing the operator, got possession of the telegraph-wire, and here he learned just what he most wanted to know, of all the preparations that had been made to receive him; and was therefore enabled to take the only route—through Vienna—which it was practicable, or rather safe, for him to take.

Gen. STOCKTON, commanding the Vermont Brigade, occupied Fairfax Court-house. Between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening, he received word from the operator at Burke's Station, that STUART was within three miles of the place; that he should remain at his post as long as possible. This was the last heard of the operator. The notice of STUART's approach was given by a Union woman residing in the vicinity. It seems that STUART reached Burke's Station at about 6 o'clock, and having an operator with him, read all the orders that passed over the wires from Gen. CARNY's headquarters, making arrangements for his reception. After remaining there an hour or more, and finding that it would be useless to attempt to capture the stores at this place, he marched directly for the Alexandria pike—striking it a few miles east of Fairfax Court-house. Here he sent forward two squadrons and drove the pickets nearly into Fairfax Court-house—to a point where Gen. STOCKTON had posted in a piece of woods two companies of the Fifteenth Vermont Infantry and a battery. As the rebels approached yelling at the top of their voices, the Vermonters fired a volley that soon caused the cavalry to wheel about and make a rapid retreat. While executing this movement the Vermonters fired another volley of musketry, and several shells were thrown from the battery. It was now about 10 o'clock at night, which accounts for the small loss of the rebels. Two of their horses were killed, two men and two horses were captured, and it is believed that quite a number of the rebel cavalry must have been wounded, though so far as is known none were left behind, except the two mentioned as prisoners. After this repulse, STUART took a cross road and passed through Vienna at about 12 o'clock the same night. He took the precaution to cut all the telegraph wires so that it was impossible to communicate with the forces in front of Washington, and therefore, his route of retreat was unobstructed. Gen. STOCKTON dispatched two orderlies with a view to have a cavalry force sent out from Hall's farm to intercept his march, but on the road near Vienna they came blunt upon the rebel cavalry, and they barely escaped capture by concealing themselves in the woods. Capt. ELLIOTT, of the First Michigan Cavalry, also narrowly escaped being captured. On the road from Burke's Station to Fairfax Court-house, the rebel cavalry were just behind him. His horse became unmanageable and ran under a tree, a limb of which unhorsed the Captain. He escaped by concealing himself behind a log.

STUART's force is estimated as high as 4,000 men, having had with him both FITZHUGH LEE's Brigade and HAMPTON's Legion, and two 6-pounder howitzers. Our troops at every point obeyed all orders promptly and with cheerfulness. Though Gen. CARNY was not himself present in person, he was ably represented in the person of Capt. SEIGEL, the Chief of his Staff, who rendered important assistance to Gen. STOCKTON.

Gen. WYNDHAM, commanding a brigade of cavalry, started last night in pursuit of STUART, to harass his rear, with what result is not known at the present time.

It is supposed that STUART must have crossed the Rappahannock River near Sulphur Springs. But, for once, he was foiled in his attempt.

A RECONNOISSANCE.

On Saturday last, Capt. SEIGEL, Chief of Gen. CARNY's Staff, with a small force, went on a reconnoissance on the Warrenton pike. He proceeded as far as Gainesville, and finding no trace of the enemy returned the same night.

LETTER FROM STAFFORD C. H.

[Continuation of Section—Camp Rumors—Another Raid by STUART.

STAFFORD COURT-HOUSE, Va., Sunday, Dec. 28, 1862.

Soon after Gen. STUART took up his headquarters at this place, a widow named MOSSOM, residing about one mile from the Court-house, was among the first to apply at headquarters to have her property protected. A guard was, as is usual, sent to her house—a large old-fashioned mansion—and all intruders were kept away. Mrs. MOSSOM not only refused to let the guard occupy any portion of the house or out-buildings, but made them stand outdoors during all the late inclement weather, and sought every opportunity to insult them by taunts, calling them mean, lying Yankees, and in every way she could invent endeavored to make their situation as uncomfortable one. The officer of the guard bore up under the infliction, as she was a lady and one of the "F. F. V.'s," until human nature could stand it no longer, and he then reported the facts to headquarters. Provost-Marshal BROWN at once took action in the matter, and took Mrs. MOSSOM's house as an hospital, a building for that purpose being much needed. This irate shecoon is now occupying apartments in her house, and is chewing the cud of repentance for her follies.

CAUGHT A TARTAR.

Several members of the Eighth New-York Regiment went outside of the lines a few days since and commenced foraging on the premises occupied by Capt. HULINE, Commissary of Gen. STUART's command and not leaving when ordered, he directed his guard to fire upon them, which they promptly obeyed, wounding one man seriously and frightening several more severely. The friends of the intruders were, of course, quite indignant at the "outrage" committed, and some threats of personal violence were made, but thus far these threats have not been carried into effect. Capt. HULINE promptly reported the facts to headquarters, and asked that the affair might be investigated; but it is believed the authorities are well satisfied with the course pursued by Capt. HULINE, and therefore an official investigation will not be necessary.

CAMP RUMORS.

The camp is filled every day with rumors of all kinds—particularly of rebel raids upon the lines between this point and Alexandria. If Madame Rumor could be believed, this corps has been destroyed in detail several times; but I imagine that if the enemy not upon such a belief, they will find themselves wofully mistaken. True, raids have been made within the lines of Gen. STOCUM, north of this corps, but so far as known the loss of Government has thus far been very trifling.

The firing of several heavy gun to-day, has started the report of an attack upon Gen. STOCUM's command, but aside from the firing there is nothing to confirm the rumor.

ANOTHER REBEL RAID.

Since writing the above, information has been received that STUART, with a force of at least 2,000 cavalry and six pieces of artillery, made a dash into Dumfries last night, and after a brisk skirmish, was compelled to retire. The place was occupied by a regiment of infantry and some cavalry, under the command of Col. CARNY, belonging to the Corps of Gen. SLOCUM. The Union forces had three killed and several wounded. The rebels, so far as is known, had six men killed and a large number were wounded, but the latter were mostly carried off by their companions. A force of cavalry, under Col. DRUMMOND, was immediately sent out from this point, but did not succeed in overtaking STUART's command.

FROM GEN. HOOKER'S DIVISION.

CAMPS GRAND DIVISION, Sunday, Dec. 28, 1862.

Some half-dozen reports of cannon were heard upon our right this morning. It is supposed the firing was in front of Gen. SIGEL's line. The cause has not yet been communicated to the headquarters of this division. It may have originated in consequence of the rebels making their appearance at Catlett's Station, it having been reported that quite a force of their cavalry are hovering about that vicinity.

Since the return of the troops to the quarters they occupied before the late battle, they have been industriously engaged in building log huts and fireplaces, and making themselves generally comfortable. Some of the regiments have exhibited great skill in adorning their camps with a profuse display of pines and evergreens. Arches of that material have been constructed over the entrances, in the centre of which are suspended wreaths containing the number of the regiment and the State to which it belongs. The troops are in a good condition of health, and anxiously awaiting orders for future movements.

Nearly all of the sick and wounded have been sent to Washington. The tents used for hospital purposes, outside the regular headquarters, have been struck, and turned over, together with the cooking utensils and equipage, to the various Division Quartermasters. To-morrow, 155 patients from the Fifth Corps, will be taken to Aquia Creek, thence to Washington. Dr. R. O. CRAIG, Medical Director of the Corps, will accompany the train to the Creek and superintend the transfer of the patients to the boat.

Gen. BURNSIDE proceeded to Washington this morning for the purpose, it is stated, of testifying on Gen. FOSTER's Court-martial.

In Gen. GRIFFIN's absence, the First Division, Fifth Corps, is commanded by Col. JAMES BARNES, of the Eighteenth Massachusetts Regiment.

It is rumored that Col. PARKER, of the Thirty-second Massachusetts Regiment, has tendered his resignation.

Capt. R. C. WALKER, who has faithfully and efficiently served as Commissary to the Third Brigade, First Division, Fifth Corps, for a long period, has lately received the appointment of Paymaster in the volunteer service.

THE McDOWELL COURT OF INQUIRY.

Continuation of Gen. Sigel's Testimony.

Special Report for the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Monday, Dec. 29, 1862.

The examination of Gen. SIGEL was resumed.

In answer to a question by Gen. McDOWELL what there was in his order No. 10 which led witness to place his right on the railroad running from Warrenton Junction to Manassas, the witness stated that he did not have the order before him.

This answer not being satisfactory to the interrogator,

On referring to the record, at the suggestion of the Court, it was found that the question had already been answered, to the effect that witness had understood the order as he had acted.

The Divisions of Gens. Schurz and Schenck, he stated, in answer to a question, were bivouacked on the pike between Buckland Mills and Gainesville, on the evening of the 26th August, or the morning of the 27th.

The Division of Gen. Schurz was about a mile from Gainesville—probably nearer to Gainesville; the Division of Gen. Schenck was first about [illegible] from Gainesville, and then received orders to move and form the left wing of Gen. Schurz, during the night.

Q.—By Gen. McDOWELL—Why did you delay the whole force on account of the rebels of Gen. Milroy.

A.—I did not delay the march. There may have been a delay for the reason that I wished to have Gen. Milroy at the head of my column, and his preparations may not have all been made. I have already stated why his preparations were made at the very last moment before moving. In relation to Gen. Milroy, I deem it my duty to state that his troops were under arms nearly the whole night, and were greatly in need of rest, as well as other troops.

Witness did not know that there was any special delay in the movements of his command on account of the position of his reserve artillery, any more than the usual time necessary for such movements. The ordinary march of troops on good roads, unopposed by anything except the moving column, is about fifteen miles per day. On the 28th of August, his corps marched thirteen miles, and Gen. Milroy's Division, sixteen. This was in the presence of the enemy, where they had to keep a good lookout.

Witness did not know of his march from Buckland Mills to Gainesville on the morning of the 28th, having been obstructed by baggage waggons. He ordered some of Gen. Schenck's men to fall into the line of march, whom he found trying to cook coffee on the road before daylight.

In marching from Warrenton Junction to Buckland Mills on the 27th, he found the enemy at the latter place, who burned the bridge there and retired. His men were under arms there the balance of the day, they being informed that there were 10,000 of the enemy in front of them, and that 60,000 had marched to Manassas, which information he reported to Gen. McDowell.

On the 28th of August, and on the ensuing night, all his troops were at Warrenton, and were resting.

It is from Warrenton to Buckland Mills about nine or ten miles.

His corps arrived at Buckland Mills about four or five o'clock on the afternoon of the 27th.

The note (produced in Court by Gen. McDowell) dated Buckland Mills, Aug. 27, 11:45 A. M., was written by his Adjutant, when he (witness) had probably gone in advance with his Staff, to direct the movements of the corps.

Q.—By Gen. McDowell—State if these letters (producing three letters) were not sent by you from Buckland Mills on the 27th, and if you know of any other reports sent to Gen. McDowell on that day, except the note above mentioned, dated 11:45 A. M.

Letter No. 1 stated situation of affairs at Buckland Mills, and urged upon Gen. McDowell the policy of concentrating all available forces at that point, so as to press upon the enemy in strong force next morning.

Letters Nos. 2 and 3, about the same import.

Witness said he did not remember of any other letters having been sent by him to Gen. McDowell on that day.

Q.—State whether you received the two letters, copies of which are here produced, dated on the 27th of August, stating that in lieu of your own cavalry, Gen. McDowell sent you, on that day, three regiments of cavalry, under Gen. Buford, to be kept until yours could be returned to you.

A.—I do not remember particularly about the letters, but depart that they were probably received. The cavalry were sent, at any rate, and arrived a little after dark.

Q.—Without asking for an opinion as to the nature or quality of the combination, did not Gen. McDowell's order, of 2:45 A. M., on the 28th of August, contemplate a combined movement of yours and Gen. McDowell's Corps.

A.—I do not know what the contemplation of the order was, but admit that it may have been such as stated, because I think it very natural that it should be.

Q.—Did not the order contemplate the combined movement should be made on the left of, or north of the Manassas Railroad?

A.—I could not understand fully from the order that my corps was to march on the left or north of the railroad. I understood, perhaps, that my right was to rest on the railroad, as near as practicable, in case of having to form in line of battle on the march.

Q.—Did not witness receive repeated instructions from Gen. McDowell, during the march—once while he was marching south of the railroad—that he should march with his right on the railroad?

A.—I do not remember having received such instructions.

Without concluding the examination of Gen. Sigel, the Court adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

In the McDowell Court of Inquiry, to-day, the cross-examination of Gen. Sigel was concluded. At its close an opportunity was afforded him to make an explanation of testimony there, but he desired time to consider, and would transmit them in writing to the Court.

Capt. Dahlgren, of Gen. Sigel's Staff, was examined concerning the remark Gen. McDowell is said to have made to him, whilst bearer of a message from Gen. Sigel to Gen. McDowell. He confirmed the testimony of his Chief. He was also lightly questioned about the movements of the enemy on the road from Gainesville to Manassas during this time.

Message of the Governor of Missouri.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

An advance copy of the Governor's Message is published this afternoon. After congratulating the Legislature and State upon the fact that at last a loyal General Assembly is convened, the Governor reviews the condition of the State since the outbreak of the rebellion, and says the number of volunteers from Missouri, after the casualties of war, and mustering out irregularly enlisted troops, is 27,000, which, with 10,500 State Militia, gives a total force of 38,000 in service for the war. The enrolled militia, numbering 82,000, gives the State the grand total of 60,000 men, the latter force furnishing a large body of men, armed and equipped for any emergency. The Governor treats of finance and the condition of railroads at length, and earnestly recommends the Legislature to adopt measures to restore the State credit and reduce the State debt, consistent with good faith toward holders of State bonds, complete the railroads yet unfinished, and rescue the interest of private stockholders. On the subject of Emancipation, the Governor says he has long been convinced that the material interests of Missouri would be advanced by substituting free for slave labor, and recommends a plan by which the children of slaves, from after the passage of the act, shall be free, but remain under the control of their owners until they have arrived at a certain age, the owners to be compensated for the diminished value of slave mothers, after thus rendered incapable of bearing slave children. During the discussion of the emancipation question, the Governor says the Legislature cannot constitutionally adopt a scheme by which the owners of slaves can be divided into classes, and the slaves of one class be emancipated without compensation, while compensation be provided for the other class.

Hawes for the amount, and charge the same to the appropriate account.

Which was laid over.

By Councilman Snyder—

Whereas, Having heard with feelings of the deepest sorrow and regret of the death of our esteemed citizen, the late Adjutant Charles Lane, of the Fifty-second Regiment, New-York State Volunteers, who gallantly charging the enemy at the head of his regiment, at the battle of Fredericksburgh, on the thirteenth instant, and dearly feeling the loss of one who in the civic walks of life was known to be the true citizen, and when called upon in the cause of justice, truth and freedom, he maintain unsullied the flag he loved so well, he immediately offered himself a willing sacrifice, if needed so, in its defence. He was present at, and engaged in, every battle fought by the Army of the Potomac, with but one exception, when he was too ill to be in his place. Ever forward in the fight, he made himself the mark for those who fought against him and his cause, and we, recognizing the dissemination of Divine Providence in the loss of him who did as duty and as well; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deeply and truly sympathize with the widowed and fatherless, and would commend them to the tender mercies and care of Him who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb, and who careth even for the sparrows of His creation; and also be it

Resolved, That a copy of this be appended (through both Branches concurring) to bring the remains of the departed Hero home to rest, passing through the Presbyterian church, near the Rappahannock River, to this City, and that the committee thereupon be empowered to make the necessary arrangements for the funeral services of the deceased, on the arrival of the remains in this City, and that a copy of these resolutions be suitably engrossed and transmitted to the family of the deceased; and be it further

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

We learn from the Army of the Potomac that all was quiet on the Rappahannock yesterday. We do not hear anything further of STUART and his rebel raiders.

Gen. CURTIS has given official notice to the War Department of the achievement of Gens. BLUNT and HERRON, with a portion of the Army of the Frontier, in marching from Fayetteville across the Boston Mountains and capturing Van Buren, on the Arkansas River. They moved over the mountains on Saturday, and marched to the river without halting, the cavalry in advance. The enemy was driven across the river—some of them being killed and wounded—and three steamboats, some camp equipments and a hundred prisoners were captured. The march of forty-five miles, with arms and service, over the mountains and through the deep mud of the valley, Gen. CURTIS characterizes as a most gallant and arduous affair.

A Nashville correspondent of the Chicago Tribune makes a very important statement in connection with the present condition of affairs in the vicinity of Nashville. He states that Gen. ROSECRANS' entire army has, for some time past, been subsisted on forage gathered in the neighborhood of the city, and that not an ounce of the rations transported thither by rail from Louisville has yet been touched. The supplies in the country around Nashville are by no means yet exhausted.

Over 100 tons of ammunition was shipped from Columbus, Ky., on Wednesday, Dec. 24, to the Army of the Mississippi.

A dispatch from Memphis, dated Dec. 24, states that in consequence of the disturbances in the vicinity of that city the elections for Congressmen in the neighboring districts had been postponed for twenty days.

After the arrival of Gen. BANKS at New-Orleans, the question of the future movements of the expedition was discussed among the general officers in his presence, when he is said to have remarked: "Gentlemen, we shall never return as we came, (pointing down the Mississippi,) and we are not going to Texas."

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Aldermen met at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and immediately took a recess for fifteen minutes, the object of which was a myth to all but the members. On reassembling, the veto message of the Mayor, on the resolution appointing 152 Commissioners of Deeds, overruled by the Councilmen the day previous, was called up for action. Mr. BOOLE thought the objections of the Mayor were inconsistent, because it would be quite an impracticable matter to settle the legal difficulty respecting the excess of appointments by limiting the number of new appointments. The most feasible plan of adjustment—and the one which the Common Council would strive to have carried out—was to have a law passed legalizing the acts of all the appointees. Such a law would set at rest all questions of doubt concerning the acts of Commissioners of Deeds in the City, since their number has exceeded 500. The Board concurred in overruling the veto. No further business of importance was transacted. Adjourned till 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The Board of Councilmen met at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The approval of the nomination of C. W. RIDLEY for Assistant Engineer of the Fire Department, for the Harlem District, was concurred in; also the resolutions of regret at the death of Adjt. CHARLES LATT, of the Fifty-second Regiment New-York State Volunteers, who was killed at Fredericksburgh. The Board adjourned till 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The Board of Supervisors met at 3 o'clock P. M. yesterday. A communication was read from the District-Attorney, stating that a vacancy substantially exists in the office of Interpreter to the Court of General Sessions, by reason of the involuntary absence of Mr. KAMPMANN, the present incumbent, and asking that his place be declared vacant and a successor appointed. (Mr. K. is supposed to be in Fort Lafayette on a charge of defrauding the Government.) The communication was referred for an investigation of the whole subject. The Mayor sent in another batch of nominations for Marshals, with the request that the Board would advise with him about the fitness of the men, before finally acting upon them. He holds that the responsibility of the appointments rests altogether upon him—the Marshals being amenable to and removable by him. Messrs. PEABODY and DAVIS argued that the responsibility rested as much upon the Board as it did upon the Mayor—the "advice and consent" required of the former by law placing the matter in that light. (It is stated that the Supervisors have demanded twenty-four of the thirty appointments, and that the balance of them are claimed by the members of the Legislature who aided in passing the bill creating the offices.) Of the thirty names sent in fourteen are those of Democrats. The nominations were all unanimously rejected. The Board adjourned till 3 o'clock P. M. next Tuesday; the Board for the next year being the same in membership as the present Board.

The receipts of cotton for the past few days in Cincinnati have been unusually large, amounting in all to 1,963 bales. Of this amount, 1,143 bales came from Memphis, 79 from Louisville, 536 from Cairo, and 205 from St. Louis.

At Chambers of the Supreme Court, yesterday, Justice BARNARD decided to hear the motions to open the defaults, and set aside the inquests taken in the cases brought against FERNANDO WOOD, to recover for injuries alleged to have been received during the riots of 1857. The motions were accordingly argued, and decision was reserved.

The Stock Market was again very active yesterday. An extraordinary business, in amount, was done in the Railway Stocks. Gold 133 per cent.; Exchange 146 per cent.

Breadstuffs were in fair request yesterday. Flour and Wheat advanced slightly; Corn was heavy. Hog products were in good demand, as were also Sugars, Hay, Hops, East India Rice, New-Orleans Molasses, and Printing Cloths. Candles, Cotton, Fish, Fruit, Hemp, Hides, Leather, Metals, Oils, Salt, Seeds, Spices, Coffee, Tallow, Teas, Wool, Whalebone, and Naval Stores were inactive. Whisky was salable and steady. Very light Freight engagements were reported.

The Live Stock Markets are again crowded. The enormous supply of Hogs, added to fair receipts of other animals, makes the largest total (71,443) of live stock ever received in this City during a single week. Coming at a time when poultry and game are abundant, and the dead meat markets are packed with dressed carcasses of all kinds, with warm, muggy weather besides, it is not surprising that they sold slowly, and that large numbers are left over. . . Beeves number 4,309 for the week, of which 4,004 were on sale at Forty-fourth-street. Prime cattle went off pretty well Monday morning, but the poorer kinds sold slowly at first, and the market grew worse till its close Tuesday night. Some extra fat steers, brought in for holiday beef, were sold at 11c. ℔ lb., net weight. They were choice animals, fed by D. ALLERTON, in Broome County, N. Y. Common Western and State cattle brought 7c.@7½c., and a good many of the rough scallawags, of which there were far too many, had to be sold at 5c. and under. The decline on ordinary and poor stock was ½c. ℔ lb. A few remnants were left unsold. . . Sheep are scarce, and 25c.@37½c. ℔ head higher. Receipts, 4,957, which is the smallest number since May, 1861. Good Sheep can now be weighed out at 5½c.@6c. ℔ lb.; extra Sheep, 6½c.@7c. . . Live Hogs beat former weeks of plenty. Receipts, 61,165, which is more than ever previously reported. The yards are crowded to excess, and still they come. Prices have fallen off ½c.; nothing selling over 4½c.@4¾c.

The Finished Year.

We present, this morning, a complete diary of the important events of the war during 1862. It is a varied view of light and shade. Yet, as a whole, it can be regarded only with satisfaction, and may be dwelt upon profitably. We are apt to give undue consequence to the immediate present. Our fears and hopes are too much regulated by the morning's news, which, in the very nature of war, may be favorable or unfavorable, just as, in the very nature of the winds and waves, your last cast of the log may show progress, or the contrary. That last cast, if you are sensible, you count but as a single item. You don't generalize about it at all. To do that, you go to the log-book itself. You found your expectation of reaching your proposed point upon the general story the log-book tells—its make-up in the long run. The chronological table is our log-book; and it is to that alone we should recur when we try to calculate the final result.

It is difficult, in the shadow of the late reverse, to realize adequately the change which the twelvemonth has wrought in our favor. In every material particular we are vastly better off than we were a year ago. We cherished hopes then, but we are immeasurably better entitled to do so now. A glance will show this.

Militarily, how stands it? A year ago we had not won on land a single battle of any account. Hatteras and Hilton Head, for which we were indebted to our navy alone, were all that relieved a dismal catalogue of disasters. It was not until the 19th of January that we gained the first earnest of future success, in the battle of Mill Springs. Since then the preponderance of victories on our side has been most marked. One need but to examine our diary methodically to be struck with this. Regard for a moment the principal engagements. In the Winter, Mill Springs, Fort Henry, Fort Donelson and Roanoke Island, all in our favor. In the Spring, New-Madrid, Pea Ridge, Newbern, Winchester, Santa Fé, Island No. Ten, Pittsburgh Landing, Fort Pulaski, Monitor and Merrimac, Fort Wright, Fort Macon, Forts Jackson and St. Philip, Bridgeport, Williamsburgh, West Point and Hanover Court-house, all successes, without an exception; the rebels having nothing to offset them but Front Royal, and the other fights when, with overwhelming force, they pursued BANKS up the Shenandoah. In the Summer, Fair Oaks, Memphis, Baton Rouge and Cross Keys, all to our advantage. In the "seven days'" battles before Richmond, consequent upon the transfer of our base from the Pamunkey to the James River, beginning with Gaines' Mills and ending with Malvern Hill, according to Gen. McCLELLAN, we "whipped the enemy every time." The battle of Cedar Mountain resulted in the enemy falling back, though in many respects they had won the advantage; while the battle of Groveton and the second battle of Bull Run, on the other hand, resulted in our falling back, though in many respects we had gained the advantage. The only positive victories of importance won by the rebels during this season, was that of James Island, near Charleston, and the repulse of our gunboats at Vicksburgh. In the Autumn our important victories were at South Mountain, Antietam, Plymouth, Iuka, Corinth, Hatchee River, Perryville, Chaplin Creek, second battle of Pea Ridge, and Cane Hill; while our only reverses were Harper's Ferry, which was the consequence of treachery, Munfordsville and Hartsville. In the present month of December we have had the victory of Prairie Grove, and those attending Gen. POPE's expedition to Goldsboro, and have suffered the discomfiture but the signal one at Fredericksburgh. This survey of the chief battles of the year, though general, is, we are sure, substantially correct. The balance is greatly in our favor.

Geographically, how is it? In Virginia, when the year dawned upon us, we were shut in upon the Western mountains, upon the narrow fringe of Arlington Heights over the Potomac, upon the two counties east of the Chesapeake, and upon the cannon-shot range of Fortress Monroe and Newport's News. Even the broad Potomac was blockaded by rebel batteries. Now we have the virtual command of at least half of the State. Then the only points we held in the Atlantic States South were Key West, Port Royal, and the quicksands of Hatteras. Now we have the command of a quarter of North Carolina, and, save Wilmington and Charleston, possess the entire Atlantic coast of the Southern State. In the valley of the Mississippi, the rebels then commanded half of Missouri and two-thirds of Kentucky, and every foot of soil south to the Gulf. Now, all of Missouri, all of Kentucky, the greater part of Tennessee, half of Arkansas, the greater part of Louisiana, and large portions of Mississippi, are within our control. In the Territories of New-Mexico and Arizona the rebel flag, which was then defiant, has ceased to float altogether. The National army lines have been extended within the year over nearly a half of the territory then claimed by the Confederacy, and—what is of great significance—it has uniformly proved that ground once lost to the rebels is permanently lost. They have again and again made desperate efforts to repossess some of the important positions taken from them; but in not a single instance with any lasting success. Their limits have been constantly growing less, and that, too, irreparably.

In our foreign relations, the year has brought, also, a decided improvement. England has committed herself more decidedly than ever to the policy of non-intervention; and, without the coöperation of that Power, there can possibly be no intervention that we need fear. The more advanced position of the National Government against Slavery has made our cause stronger with the European masses, while the extraordinary increase of our naval strength has impressed their rulers with a new and wholesome fear. The want of cotton has made itself felt with more direful effect, and yet we are safer to-day than ever from foreign interference. The year, it is true, has subjected us to some unjust treatment from abroad; but, we have a right to congratulate ourselves that we have escaped all serious complications.

Thus we stand at the close of the year, so far as regards progress actually made. If reference be had to our preparations for the future, the view is still more encouraging. When the year opened we had not a solitary iron-clad. The Monitor was not launched until the middle of February. Now we have not less than forty-four invulnerable vessels—a larger and more formidable fleet of this class than all Europe combined—while our other vessels in the service have been increased more than threefold, so that they now amount to nearly five hundred. The army has more than doubled in effective numbers; in discipline and every soldierly quality it has improved in even greater ratio. What is of higher consequence still, every department is under far more energetic direction than it was twelve months ago. Then procrastination was the ruling spirit. Now unrelaxing activity is the universal order of the day.

We make no predictions as to what 1863 will accomplish. But this much is certain: 1862 has secured gains and advantages which, by every natural law, ought to insure the complete suppression of the rebellion within the next twelvemonth. It will depend entirely upon the fidelity of the North whether this end is realized.

The Banks Expedition, and the Occupation of Texas.

It is now rendered certain that one of the great objects of the Banks Expedition is the occupation of Texas. Col. HAMILTON has gone out with all the powers of military governorship, and, it is understood, will take immediate measures toward restoring his State to the old flag. It is not believed that this will require a very serious military struggle. Twenty thousand men, aided by the Unionists who will rally at the call of their old leaders, will probably be quite enough to seize and hold all the principal points. In fact, no State can be detached so easily from the Confederacy as Texas. Its white population—480,000 by the last census—is less numerous than that of almost any other Confederate State; and of this population a much larger proportion is loyal than elsewhere. It has but few troops within its borders, its fighting men having been nearly all incorporated with the Confederate armies east of the Mississippi. So soon as the Mississippi is opened—which is the first thing in order, and will be quickly accomplished—all accessions, either of soldiers or of munitions of war from the Confederacy, could easily be prevented by a few gunboats plying up and down the river. Thus Texas, once gained, can be held with little difficulty.

It will be a most important acquisition—in real value, probably, second to none but Richmond itself. The State embraces more than a third of the present territory of the Confederacy; and its loss, in itself, will be a great discouragement to the rebellion. But, more than that, it is notorious that the primary object of secession was the extension of Slavery into the great Southwestern regions of the continent. The favorite dream was the formation of a great slave-holding empire, which should eventually rule down to the Isthmus. The most effectual way of dispelling that delusion is to interpose the strong arm of the United States between the Confederacy and its expected spoil. The occupation of Texas will be a substantial demonstration that the extension of Slavery, by means of the Confederacy, is a physical impossibility. Our very first effort, in the first stage of the war, after securing the safety of Washington, ought to have been to hem in the Confederacy on the only side where it could have hoped for future growth.

There is another consideration, too, which comes within the scope of wise statesmanship. It is well always, while hoping for the best, to be prepared for the worst;—and assuming, therefore, in this sense, that the Confederate States may possibly secure their independence, the possession of Texas would be for us an inestimable advantage. The boundary limits of the Confederacy would, doubtless, be settled by the extent of territory in its practical possession. If Texas were in our hands it would remain there. This would enable us to be independent of all the rest of the world. Otherwise, we never could be. Texas, by the best authorities, is capable of producing six millions of bales of cotton, which is two millions more than the ordinary crop of the entire United States. It has seven millions of acres also, favorable to the growth of the sugar-cane, and capable of yielding three times as much sugar as is now consumed in the entire United States. Surely a wise statesmanship, however resolved to crush the rebellion in its whole breadth, would yet take good care that, in any event, these two immense staples should be secured to the nation. The occupation of Texas would insure this.

A step further would bring another advantage, of quite equal importance. Gunboats on the Arkansas and White Rivers may, with the assistance of a small land force, take possession of the main part of Arkansas, including Little Rock, its Capital. By similar means, on the Red River, all that part of Louisiana west of the Mississippi may be easily reduced to our authority. Thus, the rebels would be left with absolutely nothing west of the Mississippi. Retaining these in our possession, there will be no longer any danger that the control of the Lower Mississippi would ever pass out of our hands. There are, therefore, abundant motives for the effort to restore Texas to the National flag. It will not be a difficult task, and every consideration, whether present or future, whether certain or contingent, urges its speedy accomplishment.

BLUNT AND HERRON ON THE WAR PATH.—The most industrious workers of the Union army by all odds, at the present time, seem to be Gens. HERRON and BLUNT, of the Army of the Frontier. After their brilliant, overwhelming and most remarkable victory over Gen. HINDMAN's rebel forces at Prairie Grove, they did not stop in their career and rush to Washington, nor even to St. Louis, to sun their laurels and receive the plaudits of idle and gaping crowds on the street corners. They did not, so far as we have seen, even instigate the ready scribes that follow most of the Union camps to write magniloquent puffs of their military genius for the papers, and suggest to the thoughtless and inappreciative Government the fitness of making each of the Western heroes a Major-General on the spot, and assigning him to an army corps or a Department. They did nothing of the sort. On the contrary, being plain, blunt men, and decidedly earnest in their rough work of whipping rebels, they paused at Prairie Grove only long enough to bury their dead enemies and their own hapless killed, and ascertain which way the redoubtable HINDMAN had fled. Being satisfied on the latter point, this excellent pair of Union leaders chose a picked corps of cavalry and artillery, and resolved to feel the enemy's position by a rapid reconnoissance in force south across the Boston Mountains, and toward the Arkansas River. The telegraph has told the rest of the story. This picked force, about 6,000 strong, "flying light," in fighting trim, with six days' rations in their haversacks, made a forced march of 45 miles over mountains and roads of incredible difficulty, pausing not, and meeting no rebel obstruction till they pushed right into the town of Van Buren, on the Arkansas River, the chief Western city in the State of Arkansas. The rebels were taken utterly by surprise, and fled across the river in haste, using three steamboats in effecting their escape. But with all their celerity they lost valuable stores and property, and the very boats that served them so handsomely at the last moment.

The occupation of Van Buren is of high importance. It is further South than any Western (frontier) army has yet advanced; and the movement being successful, it effects a permanent change in that distant theatre of war. Van Buren is the heart of the salubrious and fertile region of the Upper Arkansas River. It is situated about 125 miles above Little Rock, and flanks the capital. It is within a few miles of Fort Smith, the old and valuable military station that for so many years guarded the frontier for the United States. Southwest Missouri, it seems, is now relieved permanently from the presence of war, and the Valley of the Arkansas River must henceforth feel its shock and abide its horrors.

"The President has been strongly pressed to place the Proclamation of Freedom upon high moral grounds, and to introduce into the instrument unequivocal language ratifying to the negroes' right to freedom upon the precise principles expounded by the Emancipationists of both Old and New-England. This claim is resisted, for the reasons that policy requires that the Proclamation be issued as a war measure, and not a measure of morality; and that Law and Justice require that the slaves should be enabled to plead the Proclamation hereafter if necessary to establish judicially their title to freedom. They can do this, the President says, on a proclamation proceeding as a war measure from the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, but not on one issuing from the lecture of philanthropy."

The President in this exhibits his accustomed sagacity and good sense. The ultra Abolitionists seem determined that nothing shall be done toward the extirpation of Slavery unless it is done in the way which they prescribe, and on the principles and sentiments which they proclaim. The President has no more right to proclaim the freedom of the slaves, either in whole or in part, "on high moral grounds" and "as a measure of morality," than he has to decree the general abolition of all laws for the collection of debts. Whatever he does in this direction must be done as a measure of military policy and in his capacity as Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

President LINCOLN cannot be too cautious and guarded in restricting his action on this subject, in form as well as in fact, to his military bearings. In our judgment, he would do well to give the document which he is expected to issue in January, as a supplement to his September proclamation, the form of a military order, addressed to the Generals in command within the designated limits of the States in rebellion, and enjoining them to deprive the rebels of the military aid, rendered directly or indirectly, by their slaves. Against the justice and constitutional validity of such an order nothing could be said; while its practical results would be precisely the same as those of a Proclamation addressed to the world at large.

ARBITRARY ARRESTS.—THE MARYLAND LEGISLATURE.—The World, of yesterday, publishes a long letter from S. T. WALLIS, Esq., one of the members of the Maryland Legislature who were arrested just on the eve of their meeting in extra session in September, 1861. It is addressed to Senator SHERMAN, of Ohio, and is intended to satisfy that gentleman of the injustice of a remark made by him in the Senate, to the effect that the President was justified in thus arresting the members of the Legislature, "who were about to carry their State out of the Union." Mr. WALLIS, in a preliminary note, requests the publication of the letter because it had been "a week in Mr. SHERMAN's hands without any notice, public or private." This is perhaps our fault rather than Mr. SHERMAN's. But for the pressure of news upon our columns for the last few days, we should have given place both to the letter of Mr. WALLIS and to Mr. SHERMAN's reply, a day or two since. The World has relieved us from the necessity of publishing the first, the other will be found in our columns this morning.

Mr. WALLIS devotes himself to proving that the Maryland Legislature did not intend to pass an ordinance of secession. He does this by citing from its documents declarations which received the assent of its members, that it had no power to pass such an ordinance,—that all it could do was to refer the matter to the people, and that even this it was not inclined to do under the circumstances which then existed. Hence, Mr. WALLIS wishes Mr. Sherman to infer the Maryland Legislature was a perfectly loyal body, and the arrest of its members a very great outrage upon law and personal rights.

Mr. SHERMAN replies to this letter with great fullness of detail and with equal cogency of argument. He proves, beyond all controversy, that while the Legislature may not have intended to pass a formal ordinance of secession, they did intend to pass laws ostensibly for the preservation of the State from violence, but really to enrol and arm her people against the United States. He specifies what was actually done toward this end, and the sanction that was expected for it from the Maryland Legislature. And he fastens, beyond all cavil, upon Mr. WALLIS and his associates, the purpose of aiding the rebellion through the action of the body of which they were members. The fact that this purpose was concealed, under other pretexts, too flimsy, however, to deceive the Government, does not in the least diminish its guilt, while it rendered doubly necessary the prompt interposition of the National authority.

Mr. WALLIS, GEO. P. KANE, and other Maryland Secessionists, who were imprisoned under the President's orders, have been unusually vociferous, since their release, in protestations of their innocence. We commend any who may have been impressed by these asseverations to Mr. SHERMAN's exposure of their hollowness and hypocrisy.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.—Our State Legislature meets on Tuesday next. The Senate being the same as last year, has ten Republican and Union majority. The Assembly is generally understood to be equally divided—each party having 64. But this places in the Democratic column Mr. JOHN CUTLER, of Albany, though with what show of justice we do not perceive. Mr. CUTLER was originally a Whig, and then a Republican; he has never acted with the Democrats, not even when Mr. CORNING was running for Congress. He was nominated by both parties on the same day, and was elected without opposition. It is claimed, we are aware, that he is connected in some way with the Central Railroad Company; and that this fact secures his adhesion to the Democratic Party. We don't see the force of the argument, even if it were based on facts; but we believe that it is not, and that Mr. CUTLER has no connection whatever with the Central Railroad. We certainly see nothing in Mr. CUTLER's position, and know of nothing in his character, which should prevent his acting now, as heretofore, upon his own convictions of political principle and duty. If this is so, the Republicans and Unionists will have 65, and the Democrats 63 members in the new Assembly.

Amusements.

ITALIAN OPERA.—It will be seen by an official announcement elsewhere, that the Academy of Music, under the direction of Mr. GRAU, will open on Monday next. The season promises to be an unusually interesting one, both as regards artists and operas. Miss KELLOGG, who, it will be remembered, has been engaged for Her Majesty's Theatre, London, appears in a round of farewell performances, supported by the strong Company under Mr. GRAU's charge. Her rôles will be in DONIZETTI's "Fabiola"—a work which has not yet been received without by successive repetition. Mr. GRAU, indeed, in his and other respects, has made an unusually felicitous selection of operas, avoiding with commendable prudence the threadbare ones, and venturing with spirit on the production of novelties; thus we are to have "Il Poliuto," "Martha," the "Sicilian Vespers," "Belisario," "Robert le Diable," "Dinorah" and "Giovanna d'Arco," the last by VERDI, and for the first time in New-York. Miss KELLOGG will sustain several new rôles.

MISS BATEMAN AT THE BROOKLYN ACADEMY TO-NIGHT.—Miss BATEMAN has taken, for a brief season, that much abused, but most superb house—the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Miss KATE BATEMAN, supported by a first-class Company, including EDWIN ADAMS and J. W. WALLACK, Jr., will, to-night and to-morrow night, appear in the "Hunchback" and "Lady of Lyons." In the former play, Miss BATEMAN has, on several occasions, charmed the Brooklyn

See to high flights of enthusiasm, and the [illegible] Philharmonic house. The seats are selling rapidly.

IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON.

The First Effect of Jeff. Davis' Proclamation.

Modification of the Arrangement for the Exchange of Prisoners.

Rebel Officers in Our Hands to be Retained.

Cabinet Consultation on the West Virginia Bill.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

THE EFFECT OF JEFF. DAVIS' PROCLAMATION.

The fulmination of Jeff. DAVIS against Gen. BUTLER and the President's Proclamation has the first effect to derange the programme upon which the exchanges of prisoners have heretofore taken place. The orders and threats of the great outlaw are directly in violation of the cartel, and the first impulse of the Government was to terminate all proceedings under it. It had been merely agreed to make a general exchange, including soldiers, political prisoners and sailors, but until DAVIS shall satisfactorily explain his intentions, all commissioned officers in our hands will be retained, and only private and non-commissioned officers given up. To this extent the exchange will continue to go on, and orders to that effect were to-day telegraphed to all points. Col. LUDLOW has arrived here on this business, and will at once proceed to Fortress Monroe.

THE ADMISSION OF WEST VIRGINIA.

The Cabinet met to-day two hours earlier than usual, and was principally occupied in discussing the admission of West Virginia. In response to questions proposed by the President at a late meeting, and which we gave last night, each member had prepared a written opinion, which was to-day submitted. These opinions, though materially differing in regard to the probable results of the admission of the new State, were nearly unanimous in opposition to the dismemberment of the "Old Dominion," and the establishment on its ruins of two distinct Commonwealths, with two sets of Senators in Congress. The measure was opposed by several members, on the ground that it was a virtual acknowledgment of the legality of secession. It was argued that if Virginia was still a State in the Union, the division was illegal, and that an admission of the new State would concede the claim set up that the old State, by its secession, was absolved from its allegiance to the Union. Mr. BLAIR is understood to have opposed the admission on the ground that a division of the State would retard the development of its resources. He believes that the emancipation of the slaves would make the people of both sections homogeneous, and prevent a conflict of interest—while by the division the inhabitants of West Virginia would become isolated, and their condition made the worse. The President also signified his opposition to the measure, and will probably send in a veto on Monday. Judge USHER was present, acting for Secretary SMITH, although the latter is believed not to have yet resigned. There is a general disposition to concede that Judge USHER will receive the appointment as Secretary, though the President is silent on the subject.

A RUMOR MORE THAN USUALLY SIGNIFICANT.

A rumor, originating in the War Department, has been in circulation here for a day or two, to the effect that Mr. STANTON intends to resign his Secretaryship about the 20th of January, in favor of Mr. WARNER, his present Chief Assistant.

Mr. STANTON is a lawyer, and Mr. WARNER was his partner; and it is believed that this rumor is put forth as a test of the public capacity of endurance, and as a means of determining whether it shall be practicable for Mr. STANTON to control the sentiment in favor of his present subordinate. The change proposed would effect but little alteration in the management of the Department, except that the war would then be managed by one patent lawyer, whereas it is now managed by two.

To anybody but very partial observers, it would seem to be clear that when a change is made in the War Department, the people will demand that some man of known capacity shall assume its management.

A SPEECH ON FINANCE.

Hon. Mr. GURLEY, of Ohio, is preparing a speech for delivery in Congress, in which he intends to attack the financial policy of the Secretary of the Treasury in severe terms. Whether the outcome of a political quarrel between the member and Secretary will in any way affect the arguments leveled at the policy of the latter, may appear when the speech shall be spoken.

COMMISSIONER BOLE.

Commissioner BOLE, of the Indian Bureau, left here yesterday on a brief visit to the North. He will return in a few days. The duties of his office in the meantime will be discharged by his chief clerk, Col. MIX.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY HARRINGTON.

returned on Monday morning from a short visit to Fortress Monroe, whither he went as a respite from the severe labors of his office.

REWARDS FOR DESERTERS FROM THE NAVY.

Commodore HARWOOD, commanding the Potomac Flotilla, offers a reward of $50 for the apprehension and delivery into custody of the commandants of the nearest Navy-yard of each of the following named parties, deserters from the naval service of the United States:

Acting Third Assistant Engineer Hollis Thomas and Acting Third Assistant Engineer W. H. Gleason, both of the United States steamer Currituck; Acting Master's Mate T. H. Brown and Acting Master's Mate Augustus Fassett, of the Potomac Flotilla; John H. Cameron, engineer on board Rescue Frame, recently, and H. M. Bates and John McCue, landsmen, all of the Currituck.

NUMBER OF PATIENTS IN HOSPITALS.

There are between thirteen and fourteen thousand sick and wounded soldiers in the different hospitals here. Since the battle at Fredericksburgh, about 9,500 have been sent to Northern hospitals.

CHURCHES BEING GIVEN UP.

The Medical Department here is vacating and returning to their congregations, as fast as possible, the various churches which, for some months past, have been used as Government hospitals.

PROPOSALS FOR ENVELOPES.

The Postmaster-General invites proposals, until the 10th of January, for furnishing his Department with 1,000,000 envelopes, more or less, as the Department may require, to be used for covering letters required to be written. The contract will be awarded to the party delivering the lowest and best bid, which is to be determined by taking into account the price and the quality of the samples. Bonds and security for the faithful performance of the contract will be required.

Bids are also invited to furnish 100,000 envelopes to have printed on them, in such manner as the Department may prescribe, the words "Post-office Department," "Official Business," and "Postmaster."

THE FORTER COURT-MARTIAL.

The testimony in the Porter Court-martial to-day was quite exculpatory of Gen. Porter. Brig.-Gen. Barnes testified that the night of Aug. 27 was too dark to march troops from Buckland Mills to Gainesville unless on roads with a guide; that between New-Market and Groveton the country is much broken by surface and woods; that no movement could have moved that night, with artillery, prepared to meet the enemy; that on Aug. 29 the country between him and Porter was broken. He always considered Porter a faithful, energetic, devoted officer.

Major Hexamer, of the New-York Fifteenth, testified that his regiment occupied a position in front of Morell's Division on Aug. 28. The enemy was in front of Porter all day in heavy force, nearly ten thousand men—enough to oppose Porter's entire corps, and of course prevent Porter from attacking the enemy's right, as directed by Gen. Pope.

Brig.-Gen. Syzes, commanding one of Porter's Divisions, testified to his presence at Porter's post on the evening of Aug. 27, when Porter received the order from Pope to march to Bristoe Station; that after a full conference between Gen. Porter and Gens. Morgan, Sykes and Barnes, it was unanimously determined that, owing to the darkness of the night, the difficult roads, and our soldiers being fatigued, it was not advisable to march at 1 o'clock on the 28th, as ordered by Pope; that he never in his whole military life had so much trouble to clear a road of a wagon train; that the military necessity of marching to Bristoe Station was not apparent on his arrival there on August 28. Gen. Sykes said Porter's reputation as a General was such that he did not see how it could be questioned; that Gen. Porter's attention to the wants of his command, and his attention to minutiæ was such that officers often thought Porter trusted too little to the capacity of his division commanders. Porter seemed to do everything himself.

Gens. Sykes and Hexamer will be examined to-morrow; Gens. McClellan and Burnside in the latter part of the week. The evidence will probably be closed on Saturday.

THE INDIAN REGIMENTS.

The Indian regiments, recently authorized by the War Department for service in the Indian Territory, are already in process of organization, and the list of their officers appointed by the President is nearly complete.

EXAMINING SURGEONS APPOINTED.

The Commissioner of Pensions to-day made the following appointments of Examining Surgeons:

Dr. [illegible] Denver, at Monroe, Michigan.
Dr. J. [illegible]ERLEY, at Leon, Iowa.
Dr. [illegible] G. GRANT, at Troy, Kansas.
Dr. [illegible] HOPKINS, at Emporia, Kansas.
Dr. JOHN P. DIXSON, at Lockport, Illinois.

VISITORS.

SOLDIERS DISCHARGED.

Over two hundred wounded and disabled soldiers were discharged from the hospitals to-day. Surgeons appointed for the purpose by the Surgeon-General, visit the hospitals daily to discharge soldiers who have been disabled.

WOUNDED MEN SENT HOME.

One hundred and fifty wounded soldiers belonging to Connecticut and New-Jersey regiments were sent yesterday to their States, by request of their Representatives in Congress.

REINSTATED.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, D. C., No. 23, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 212.—So much of "General Orders" No. 163, of Nov. 14, 1862, as dismisses Capt. Fitz-John W. Gray, Second Regiment New-York Volunteers, is hereby revoked, it appearing that he was tried and acquitted by a Court-martial of the offence for which he was dismissed.

By order of the Secretary of War.
L. THOMAS, Adjutant-General.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

FINANCIAL.

It is ascertained authoritatively that there is no foundation for the rumor that the Committee on Ways and Means have entertained any proposition whatever to change the existing law in receiving old Demand Treasury Notes for Customs. The Secretary of the Treasury has decided not to make any further issue of certificates of indebtedness beyond the limited amount already to the credit of disbursing officers. It is understood the holders will have the privilege, as soon as practicable, to fund them into twenty years' six per cent. bonds.

REVENUE DECISION.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided that whenever lumber is cut, planed, matched, tongued, and grooved and beveled, and thus or otherwise prepared for dimension boxes or other packages, whether it is used on the premises where prepared, or sold in the market, it shall be considered a manufacture, and used as such.

REVENUE STAMPS.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue is now prepared to supply all the variety of stamps required by the Excise law, in quantities sufficient for the use of the people of the District of Columbia and of the States west of the Rocky Mountains. All persons within the District and States above specified, guilty of wilfully neglecting to use said stamps hereafter, will be subject to the penalty provided in the law.

NAVAL.

Lieut.-Commander FAIR SERRELL has been detached from the St. Marys, and ordered to the command of the sloop-of-war Cyane, now in the Pacific. Lieut. R. H. Fashionable Marriage in St. Stephen's Church.

Last evening a marriage ceremony was performed in St. Stephen's Church, the interest in which warrants a brief notice. The happy pair were the youngest sons of Dr. CURTENIUS—Miss A. C. CURTENIUS and Mr. W. R. CRAWFORD, of the United States Coast Survey. An hour before the time at which the ceremony was to take place the streets in the immediate vicinity of the church were thronged by people who desired to be present on the occasion, and Twenty-eighth-street, on which the church is, was lined on both sides with carriages. At about 7½ o'clock the church was crowded, and most afterward were crowded. Those who could not obtain seats stood upon the backs of the pews. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. CURTENIUS, and was in the usual manner. The building was brilliantly illuminated, the altar was brought into the clearest view by ostentatiously arranged gaslights and tapers. When the expected time arrived, the happy pair entered from the front, and, with their accompanying grooms and bridesmaids, advanced to the altar by the main broad aisle.

The groomsmen and bridesmaids were arranged in front of the altar, as follows:

Mr. G. M. Mansfield,	Miss Almira M. Smith,
Mr. F. H. Gerdes, Jr.,	Miss Josephine Rivera,
Mr. J. S. Gouley, U. S. A.,	Miss Julie de Monthieilon,
Mr. Frank A. Otis,	Miss Zoe Atocher,
Mr. Thomas White,	Miss Phebe Bradhurst,
Mr. C. Tharon,	Miss Catherine O'Reilly.

The organist and choir in attendance announced the appearance of the distinguished party, and the Anthem of Joy was continued until they were in front of the altar, after which the marriage ceremony commenced. The bride was given away by the brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Capt. JAMES, also of the Coast Survey.

The service over, the great mass of people separated, and then the guests who had been specially invited, entered their carriages and were driven to No. 48 East Twenty-eighth-street, where they found that and the adjoining building prepared for their reception. Feasting, dancing and every other legitimate species of enjoyment, were then "the order of the evening." Many costly presents were sent to the bride. Among them were a most elaborately finished [illegible] clock, with accompanying ornaments, by F. M. GARDES, United States Army; a splendid silver service from Mrs. E. M. BRESSANDE and Miss BYRON, of Paris; a superb dressing-case, jewelry, flowers, &c.

Ringing the Old Year Out and the New Year In.

1. Ringing the Changes on Eight Bells.
2. Hail Columbia.
3. Yankee Doodle.
4. Old Dog Tray.
5. Grand Medley, arranged expressly for Trinity Church Chimes, by GEORGE F. BRISTOW.
6. Evening Bells.
7. Last Rose of Summer.
8. Columbia the Gem of the Ocean.
9. Yankee Doodle.
10. Home Sweet Home.

Commutation of Death Sentence by the President.

U. S. Marshal MURRAY yesterday received from the State Department a commutation of the sentence of FERDINANDO DEMANDI, the Italian, who was convicted at the July term of United States District Court of the murder of a fellow seaman named Frank Vincent, on board the American ship Blonde, on her voyage from England to Singapore. DEMANDI was to have been hung the 9th of February next. The jury recommended him to mercy, which recommendation was concurred in by the Judge and the District Attorney, and in accordance therewith President LINCOLN has commuted his sentence to 10 years at hard labor in the State Prison at Sing Sing.

Treasure Shipments for California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

WELLS, FARGO & Co. will charge ¾C6 per cent. for shipping gold to New-York by the next steamer. It is generally anticipated that the treasure shipment for New-York will be exceedingly light, and that the bulk going forward will go by British steamer from Aspinwall.

THE TREASURER OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT, with which pleasure, acknowledges the receipt of $1,622 25-100, by the hands of Zephar Mills, Esq., Chairman of Committee on Public Money, being the proceeds of the benefit given at Niblo's Garden, Oct. 23, 1862, in aid of the Widow and Orphans Fund of the Fire Department.
JOHN S. GILES, Treasurer.

The Treasurer, in behalf of the Department, tenders his unfeigned thanks to the Benefit Committee for their untiring exertions in promoting an enjoyment worthy of the patronage of our fellow-citizens, and in the liberal manner in which they responded to the efforts of the Committee elicits our warmest acknowledgment. To Mr. Wheatley, the proprietor of the theatre, for a donation of $100, we tender our sincere thanks. It is gratifying to the friends and members of the Department, that amidst the difficulty and trouble that beset our beloved country, the widows and orphans of those who sacrifice comfort, health and even life itself, in discharge of their arduous duties as Firemen, are so substantially remembered.

AN EXTRAORDINARY LETTER FROM CAPT. SEMMES, OF THE ERIVATEER ALABAMA.

The passengers on board the unfortunate Ariel unite in testifying to the great politeness, chivalry and urbanity of Capt. Semmes while his prisoners of war; but the following letter which he dispatched to this City is the most remarkable evidence of his versatility, humor and politeness yet published:

CONFEDERATE STEAMER ALABAMA, Dec. 5, 1862.

Messrs. P. H. Drake & Co., New-York:

GENTLEMEN: I regret to inform you that the twelve cases of Plantation Bitters found on board the Ariel, consigned to H. Cordova & Son, Panama, will not be likely to reach their destination, having been transferred to my vessel. Having procured one case while at the Island of Martinique, its beneficial effects in my hospital room and in curing the scurvy, was such as to render it too desirable an acquisition to pass, particularly as it was evidently intended for the South from the name Plantation. Rest assured, Sirs, I trust you will not fail to freight each vessel likely to cross my path, with the Plantation Bitters, and I will guarantee to place a case in the hands of President Davis before the 4th of March.

I have the honor to remain, respectfully, yours,
RAPHAEL SEMMES.

The undersigned are exceedingly obliged to the gallant Captain for such a capital advertisement, and will assure him that, should he happen to visit Fort Lafayette, we will endeavor to reciprocate his politeness with a case of S. T.—1860—X., warranted to cure the ennui.

The above is but a sample of the miscellaneous and widespread fame of the Plantation Bitters. No article before ever performed so many cures, or gave such perfect satisfaction. They are just the thing for the weak, debilitated and careworn of all ages and conditions of life, acting as a gentle stimulant and thorough tonic.

They purify, strengthen, and invigorate.
They create a healthy appetite.
They are an antidote to change of water and diet.
They overcome effects of dissipation and late hours.
They strengthen the system and enliven the mind.
They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers.
They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.
They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation.
They cure Diarrhœa, Cholera and Cholera Morbus.
They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.
Sold by all dealers everywhere.

FINANCIAL.

SEVEN PER CENT. CALIFORNIA COUNTY BONDS.
We offer for sale $35,000 7-per cent. bonds of the County of Santa Clara, and $35,000 of the County of San Mateo, California, being part of a late issue authorized by an act of the Legislature, and a vote of the people for a subscription of the Capital Stock of the San Francisco and San Jose Railroad Company, of which stock $300,000 was taken by Santa Clara County, and $100,000 by San Mateo County. The coupons are payable semi-annually, May and November, (and probably in gold,) and the principal in 1871. These two counties lie next adjacent San Francisco on the Bay, and are in a highly prosperous condition. By the report of the Treasurer of Santa Clara, April, 1862, the indebtedness of the County beyond these bonds was but $21,000, (and the taxable property in 1860 was $9,300,000,) making a total indebtedness when these are all issued, of $221,000. The Treasurer has in hand funds to pay coupons for the present year.
San Mateo County, with the exception of these bonds, is entirely free of debt, and had $1,600,000 taxable property in 1858. By an act of the Legislature, a special tax is levied to meet the interest, and for the Sinking Fund to liquidate the bonds at maturity.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

Hon. James Brooks on the Rebellion.

He Introduces Compromise Resolutions, which are Passed.

The Democracy assembled in considerable numbers, last evening, at the rooms of the Democratic Union Association, No. 562 Broadway, corner of Twenty-second-street, the occasion being a celebration of the fitting up of the new rooms of the Association. A brass band was in attendance, and previous to the vocal exercises, enlivened the assemblage with choice selections of music. The rooms, as newly fitted up, present a very comfortable appearance, and are situated in a section of the City quite convenient for our up-town citizens of Democratic tendencies. The National flag was draped in front of the rostrum, and behind it was hung a banner bearing the inscription, "Democratic Union Association of New-York." At 7½ o'clock the meeting was called to order by LUKE F. CORNING, who welcomed the audience to the new rooms, and trusted that they would continue to be the headquarters of a party successful in the future as in the past. He congratulated them on the changed feeling which was now observable in favor of conservatism. He then briefly narrated the rise and progress of the Democratic Union Association, stating what they had done during the past two elections, and the exertions they were determined to make in future to bring the Northern people to a sense of their duty as citizens in this crisis of our country. After a short appeal for material aid he introduced Hon. JAMES BROOKS, who spoke substantially as follows:

Those who expected him this evening to deal in rhetorical flourishes would be disappointed. The occasion was too solemn. As the ancients, in times of peril, invoked the Dii immortales, so should the citizens of our country now invoke the aid of the Immortal God. When he last addressed the Association two proclamations were threatening, as also a war order, which were adverse to all our ideas of freedom. One proclamation substituted Provost-Marshals for civil Courts, and in effect did away with the constitutional guarantees of liberty to the citizen.

We were now in the midst of a civil war equaled only by the decisive civil wars of Rome. We, who are not of the Administration, were drawn into that war, and went into it for the support of the Constitution. We acknowledged no allegiance to the Administration, but we did acknowledge loyalty and fealty to the Constitution which had been framed by the wisdom of our fathers. By deep reading he had discovered that the great principles of liberty—the Magna Charta, wrung by strong arms from King John of England, were condensed and embodied in our Constitution. When a convention met in South Carolina, and subsequently another in Montgomery, Ala., with the purpose of asserting that Constitution, the cry went forth throughout the whole land, "The Constitution shall be maintained!" more particularly as the enemy were supposed to be rushing on our Capital, and unless we rushed there to meet them Washington itself might be taken from us. Mr. B. then read from the President's Inaugural, in which the Chief Magistrate declared he had no right or inclination to interfere with the institutions of any State. He also recited the Crittenden resolutions. These were the official declarations of the purposes and objects of the war. This was a war for the Constitution—my war, your war, the war of all of us, and we are not committed verbatim to any other war. (Loud applause.) Now, look at the reverse of the picture. On the 22d of September Mr. LINCOLN issued his Proclamation of Emancipation—one that he had no right to issue under the Constitution. Who declared ABRAHAM LINCOLN the law-making power of the United States?

A VOICE—The people.

Mr. B. continued. The people never gave him a majority of their votes. He is a minority President, and holds his office, not by the votes of the people, but in spite of the people, and by virtue of the Constitution of the United States. (Cries of "Put him out.") Mr. B. then went on to review the orders given to the army and navy regarding the carrying out of the terms of the proclamation. He denied that the army and navy could be called on to do more than carry out the civil law and the Constitution. In the days when the English people were suffering under the tyranny of the Stuarts and Tudors, the system of proclamations was in vogue; but the present Constitution of Great Britain sets these proclamatory laws at naught. Two hundred years ago the English people forbade this trampling on their rights, and it was left for the Republic and this Administration to lift from the tomb of the Stuarts and Tudors this old monarchical doctrine, and attempt to establish it in a Republic which boasted of the freedom of the citizen.

The first effect of this proclamation was to disunite the North, and cement the South more strongly together. Before the issue of this proclamation victories cheered us on. Kentucky and Maryland were kept in the Union; New-Orleans was captured; Norfolk surrendered; but since then Providence has ceased to smile on our arms, as a warning to us not to depart from the path of rectitude. He denied that the proclamation was even beneficial as a war measure, as asserted in the Congressional resolutions lately passed. But these proclamations were issued in former days. Lord HOWE, Lord CORNWALLIS and Lord DUNMORE issued them in the interest of the English Government during our Revolutionary War. EDMUND BURKE, in an address to the Crown during the pendency of the War of Independence, denounced these proclamations. They did more than anything else to render the war unpopular in England, and thus in the end the British Government was compelled to acknowledge our independence. Sir GUY CARLETON and COBBAN, in the War of 1812, issued similar proclamations, and were similarly denounced.

Mr. BROOKS said he would not directly charge that Mr. LINCOLN, by means of this proclamation declaring all slaves free after the 1st of January next, meant to incite the 4,000,000 blacks at the South to rise in rebellion against their masters, and butcher, not only them, but their wives and children—he could not believe there was any man holding the position of the President, nor any man who professed to be actuated by the principles of Christianity, or even of that mere humanity, could meditate such a thing—but such would be the necessary result of carrying out the proclamation, (the speaker) understood it. It would render the whole country a Pandemonium, more horrible than that which has rendered so famous Hayti and St. Domingo.

Among those who are most committed against these proclamatory efforts to incite servile insurrection, is Ex-President QUINCY ADAMS, who declared such action nowhere admitted as a rightful mode of warfare. Mr. ADAMS committed himself and his Government against the emancipation of slaves in time of war. Even if he never committed himself to this theory, there stands the honor and dignity of the Government committed against it. Mostly against thus using slaves as President LINCOLN proposes to use them. He hoped he was not only addressing this audience, but no inconsiderable portion of the Northern people, and he also hoped, some of our quondam countrymen of the South, with whom it was necessary to stand right on the record. We must convince them that we are making war only for the Constitution, and when the time comes that this Constitution can be subverted, and the war power is to take its place, it is a matter of indifference to us whether the Union is maintained or not, and the sooner we can get rid of such a Government the better! (Tremendous applause.) The exercise of this so-called "war power" makes the President an Emperor, a Czar, a Caesar; it is not law. No officer is obliged to obey it—no soldier in the field is bound to show any respect to it. (Great applause.) He was aware that this was strong language. At one time it would have consigned him to Fort Warren or Fort Lafayette. But that time is past. He deemed it his duty to say that it was utterly futile, perfectly useless, to attempt to exterminate and crush out eight millions of Anglo-Saxons. Like attempts had been made in Ireland, in Wales, but they never succeeded. Anglo-Saxons cannot be exterminated. EDMUND BURKE had said that British liberty and the British Constitution (not British arms) had subjugated Ireland. We must act in like manner. Whenever a party shall rise up here at the North, grating and holding out equality to the South, then the South will begin to be subjugated. That Constitution, that fear, is theirs as well as ours, and when we make them sure of this equality a party will rise up in the South that will put down all Secessionists there. But, he was asked, what do we mean to do? Submit to rebellion—allow rebels to rule, and, perhaps, attack our cities and homes in the North? Not at all. We wish to bring back the Government to the constitutional path, and to support it when it shall revert to the principles upon which our nation was founded. He thought this Government was mainly established as an exterior, not an interior one. Its principal object was to make a uniform rate of tariff duties, to protect our commerce on the seas, etc. He did not propose to surrender New-Orleans, or Norfolk, or Fortress Monroe. He would go further, and if it were necessary to the peace and safety of the country, and to the carrying out of the Constitution, he would cease and hold Charleston, Mobile, Savannah and every point on the sea coast. He would tell the South that our Constitution, one country was necessary to the liberty of each section. "Divide and conquer" was the motto adopted now toward us by the monarchs of Europe, and it was time that the people, both North and South, would awake to the imminency of this crisis, and bring back the Government to the Constitutional landmarks. He liked to speak for practical purposes, and therefore he would present some resolutions to be submitted to this meeting, and to both the North and the South. He intended as a medium through which to convey these resolutions, a State which has never been alien either to the North or the South—the glorious State of New-Jersey. That State was a homogeneous one, and her votes would prove influential. He then read the following:

Resolved, That the State of New-Jersey, through her State Government, be respectfully requested to propose, in order to arrest the existing civil war:

1. By inviting the non-slaveholding States and the loyal slaveholding States—Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri—to meet in Convention, in Louisville, Ky., on the —— day of February next.

2. By requesting the permission of the President of the United States to send Commissioners to Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas and Tennessee, to invite them also to meet in like National Convention.

3. Be it further resolved, That the President be requested by the State Government of New-Jersey to declare an armistice with or for such State or States as may accept this call for a National Convention.

Resolved, That a Committee be created, on the part of this Association, to present these resolutions to the Governor and Legislature of New-Jersey, and to urge that State that, in consideration of her revolutionary, military and patriotic associations, she is entitled thus to lead in a National Convention for the restoration of the Union of these States.

Mr. BROOKS sat down, amid great cheering.

Mr. CORNING then stated that the next meeting of the Association would be held at the rooms on the evening of next Tuesday fortnight, and that it was the intention of the Managing Committee to obtain the services of distinguished speakers, so that there would be one address before the Association every week until the next campaign.

Loud cries were had here for the question on the resolutions, which were put and declared carried in the affirmative—no negative vote being called for. After giving three cheers for the resolutions and three more for Mr. BROOKS, the meeting adjourned.

MARYLAND AND THE REBELLION.

A Letter from Senator Sherman, of Ohio, to Hon. S. Teakle Wallis, of Maryland.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 26, 1862.

Hon. S. T. WALLIS—Sir: Your letter of the 12th of December has been received.

If I was convinced by it that it was not the purpose of the Maryland Legislature, of which you was a member, to avail itself of the first safe and practicable opportunity to join the Confederates in rebellion against the United States, I would cheerfully correct what I said in the Senate of you and your colleagues. As a student of the common law, I have been taught to regard the right of personal liberty as the most sacred privilege of a freeman, never to be affected except for crime, or in the case provided by the Constitution, when the public safety is jeopardized by rebellion or invasion. If your imprisonment was not, in my opinion, within this rule, I certainly would not justify your arrest.

The language attributed to me in your quotation is not accurately reported.

I said in the debate referred to:

"So in the case of the Maryland Legislature, where the President believed that certain gentlemen were conspiring to overthrow the Government, not probably by open force, but by the exercise of their power as members of the Legislature, I believe the President would have been wanting in his duty to his country if he had not arrested these men, and detained them at least until he defeated their disloyal and treasonable purpose."

Your elaborate letter no where contains any denial of the "treasonable and disloyal purpose" of the Legislature; nor is there any denial that they were conspiring the overthrow of the Government by the exercise of their power as members of the Legislature; nor could I fail to be impressed with the entire absence of any avowal of loyal obedience to the Government on your part. Your letter confines the vindication of the Legislature to a citation of their proceedings to show that both Houses had early in the session voted their opinion that they had no power to pass an ordinance of secession, and that on the 14th of May had voted it inexpedient to call a sovereign convention. You add your assevemation to the truth of these facts, sufficiently proved by the record, and as I understood your letter, you pledge your personal veracity that there was no intention to pass such an ordinance.

This defence, it is apparent, is merely a technical denial of one form of arraying the State of Maryland against the United States; but to denote the nature of the second party form, on that point, which a few months it altered circumstances could reverse; and unfortunately the evidence of their purpose, on the first favorable occasion, to deny the United States and resist its authority, is in the possession of the public, and, therefore, probably of the Government, corroborated by the avowed purposes of some of its members just on the eve of their election—your own among them.

I cannot state the facts affecting individual cases, and shall fortify the opinion expressed by me in the Senate by events happening since the commencement of the rebellion, leaving to the proper authorities the task of designating individuals affected by them.

On the 19th of April, 1861, when the blood of United States soldiers, shed in your streets without provocation, was still warm, a meeting was held in Monument-square, under the auspices of the Mayor, in which your participation is thus described in your city papers:

"S. TEAKLE WALLIS, Esq., was called for, and responded in a short but forcible address. Like the Mayor he counseled the people to rely upon the authorities, who would stand by them. He had not come to the meeting for the purpose of making a speech, but had come with the Mayor at his request. It was not necessary to speak. If the blood of citizens on the stones in the street did not speak it was useless for man to speak.

He assured the meeting that his heart was with the South, and he was ready to defend Baltimore. He hoped the blood of the citizens SHED BY AN INVADING FOE, would obliterate all party differences, and seal the covenant of brotherhood among the people."

With that speech before the people, not disavowed, which was an act of war—a formal participation in what had occurred and what immediately followed—you, on the 24th of April, with nine others, were elected to the Legislature.

The Legislature met on the 26th, and on the 27th of April—the day on which the Senate disclaimed all constitutional power to pass an ordinance of secession—both Houses passed, by a suspension of the rules, the first law of the session, which is as follows:

"The Mayor and City Council may and they are hereby authorized to raise and appropriate at their discretion, and in the modes and at the times which they may judge best, all moneys whatsoever, which they may deem necessary and proper for the defence and protection of said city, and to provide for the payment of the same by taxation or otherwise."

On the same day, standing second in the published laws, and likewise passed by a suspension of the rules, is an act to confirm and ratify an ordinance of the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore there recited, appropriating five hundred thousand dollars for the purpose of putting the city in a complete state of defence against ANY description of danger arising, or which may arise out of the present crisis, the same to be expended under the direction of the Mayor of the City.

That money was appropriated for levying war against the United States; its avowed purpose was to resist the transit of troops over the usual and direct route to the Capital, and it was placed in the hands of those already engaged in that resistance. For, on the afternoon of the 19th of April, Mayor BROWN, at the meeting in the Square, declared that "he was a citizen of Maryland, and would protect its soil with his life," against those whom you called the invading foe.

He was, by law, a member with CHARLES HOWARD, WM. H. GATCHELL, JOHN W. DAVIS and CHARLES D. HINKS, of the Board of Police Commissioners, and before midnight on the 19th of April, the Mayor and Board of Police had ordered GEO. P. KANE, their Marshal of Police, to destroy the railroad bridges connecting the city with the Northern States, and before daybreak all railway communication was at an end. They had arrested the march of the troops of the United States by a warlike operation of the most decisive kind, and jeopardized the safety of the Capital and the existence of the Government.

On the same evening, before departing to execute this order, Mr. KANE, in reply to a telegram from BRADLEY T. JOHNSON of Frederick, offering troops, sent the following telegram:

"Thank you for your offer; bring your men by the first train and we will arrange with the railroad afterward. Send expresses over the mountains and valleys of Maryland and Virginia for the riflemen to come without delay. Fresh hordes will be down on us to-morrow, (the 20th.) We will fight them or die.

GEO. P. KANE."

This was posted in Frederick, with a placard as follows, signed by BRADLEY T. JOHNSON:

"All men who will go with me will report themselves as soon as possible, providing themselves with such arms and accoutrements as they can. Double-barreled shot-guns and buckshot are efficient."

And JOHNSON, with what men he could get, did go [illegible] to the aid of the rebellion against the United States. They assumed under their command the Frederick Fitzpatrick, giving commission of assistant adjutant-general, which the Governor had just withdrawn from him, and placed under them, on the 18th, for loyal service. They began, on the 20th of April, the organization and training of a volunteer force, instead of simply deputy to get men and arms, and placed it under the command of ISAAC R. TRAUNER, and that man, both now in the rebel service.

On the 20th of April, it was, that the City Council appropriated half a million of dollars for the defence of the city against the dangers of the crisis—that is, [illegible] what you described the day before as the "burning foe," what KANE the day before called "fresh hordes," what the law calls United States troops marching to the Capital of the nation; and it was that appropriation which the Legislature ratified in their second act, only seven days afterwards.

No time was lost in using the money. The report of the expenditures is before me; and the items will bear but one interpretation; the chief of them are for arms and ammunition, $94,174; for blankets and [illegible] $3,885; for marine and navy, [illegible] alterations of steamers and wages of men, [illegible] 31; for rations, $9,234; for pay of officers and men, $7,735; for horse and hack hire and hay, [illegible] and other of the time for patrolling and guarding towns.

The Mayor the Board of Police bought 1,000 carbines and rifles, 4,000 pikes, 16,194 canister shot, 7,740 cannon balls, 4,936 pounds of lead, over 24,000 ball cartridges, 450,000 caps, besides other ammunition and arms otherwise obtained.

Thus armed, the Mayor and Board of Police Commissioners took military control of the City; the port and the telegraph lines to Washington and Harper's Ferry, while they cut those to the North; the running of the trains to Washington was arrested, while those to Harper's Ferry were continued; vessels were not allowed to leave port with provisions, munitions of war, &c.

No vessel could sail unless by leave of the Board or of ISAAC R. TRAUNER, commanding their volunteer force. This system was fully inaugurated on the 22d of April, and on that day, TRAUNER in a note to CHAS. HOWARD, discountenanced a military parade because the "display of military will be a sorry one and calculated to dishearten our citizens," and "if represented abroad will rather invite and encourage attempts from the North to defy us and pass through the city," not to attack it. By an order in the minutes of the Board on the same day TRAUNER was authorized to allow the Eastern Shore steamer to pass, on condition of not stopping at Annapolis, where Gen. BURNSIDE then was; and Gen. SEWARD, by letter of that date, writes to CHAS. HOWARD:

"I know not what to think of the rumor from Annapolis; but if the Massachusetts troops are on the march from that place to Washington I shall be in motion very early to-morrow morning to pay my respects to them."

During the 22d and 23d of April the telegrams and memoranda found in the office of the Board show they were in communication with RANSON HARPER, commanding six thousand rebels at Harper's Ferry; and their agent "reported six thousand men ready to come down."

The letters found further show that Gen. SEWARD had applied to Gov. LETCHER, of Virginia, Gen. COOPER at Alexandria, and HARPER at Harper's Ferry, for arms, and had obtained the promise of 5,000 muskets. LETCHER's letter to SEWARD shows he ordered 1,000 to be sent, and 2,000 did come to the possession of the Board of Police, and were claimed by SEWARD; and HOWARD wrote to JAS. M. MASON to know if he should deliver them to SEWARD for the State of Maryland.

Nineteen hundred of them are now in Fort McHenry; the correspondence is in the hands of the Government. So open and complete was the state of war, that HUNTER, commanding the United States receiving ship in the harbor, wrote to the Board on the 22d of April, stating he had occasion to employ a steamtug in the service of the United States, and requesting them to authorize him to use one on that day in the harbor of Baltimore and the adjacent waters; and that request was respectfully declined by the Board.

These acts of war were fully crowned by the order of the Police Commissioners forbidding the display of the National flag, and the arrest of loyal men who refused to obey them.

The attempt which has occasionally been made to explain those acts as precautions for the preservation of the internal peace of the State, or to repel lawless incursions of armed men from the North, is unworthy of further notice. I cannot see how a candid man can be misled by them.

In this state of open war, the Police Commissioners went through the forms of an election by which on the 24th of April, you were returned to the Legislature to represent this rebellious faction, by 9,000 votes out of 30,000—31,000 having staid at home, and no one having dared to oppose the armed rebellion, headed by the Police Commissioners!

In the flush of combined success, you and your colleagues met at Frederick, on the 26th; on the 27th you furnished the sinews of war to your confederates; and a Force bill was reported to the Senate, and passed to a second reading by 14 to 8, by which the State militia was reorganized and placed under the power of the six Commissioners, named in the bill, all avowedly enemies of the United States; the Gov*ernor was stripped of all power over it*; a large sum of money was appropriated to arm and equip it; and the bill if passed would have placed the State under an absolute military despotism of the enemies of the Government, and left your loyal Government at their mercy.

But the small vote revealed the radical weakness of the rebellion in Baltimore; on the 28th the Police Commissioners began to apologize for their conduct, and put a softer color on it; the Force bill caused great public indignation; the Legislature was threatened by the loyal people of Frederick with expulsion if they dared to pass it, and on the 3d of May Baltimore added her protest and menace of resistance; and the leaders in the Legislature and their confederates out of it began to think of safety while waiting events.

The Force bill was dropped; on the 8th the Legislature passed a bill of indemnity exempting from prosecution or punishment the Mayor and Police Commissioners and all persons who acted under their orders in their effort to maintain peace and good order and prevent further strife on and after the occurrences on the 19th day of April, in consequence of such acts, and obedience to such orders, " and repealing all laws in force in this State at the time of said acts, so far as regards said persons and their acts."

In a word, the Legislature outlawed the United States and their soldiers!!

On the 9th, the next day, the Committee on Federal Relations presented their report and resolutions, which were adopted on the 14th; but which you very inaccurately describe as "a resolution against the expediency of even calling a sovereign Convention of the people of the State."

The resolution was, that "under existing circumstances" it is inexpedient to call a sovereign Convention of the State at this time.

The report shows a sudden variation in opinion on the subject; when you met on the 26 of April, Convention was the general wish; in less than two weeks, on the 5th of May, the Committee tell us there was an almost unanimous feeling against calling a Convention at the present time.

Two weeks more might, under favorable auspices, work another revolution of opinion.

"To the Committee," the report says, "the single fact of the military occupation of our soil by the Northern troops in the service of the Government, against the wishes of our people, and the solemn protest of the State Executive, is a sufficient and conclusive reason for postponing the subject to a period when the Federal ban shall be no longer upon us."

That Federal ban might be removed at any moment by military disasters, which you were doing your best to occasion; and then the question of expediency would be solved in a different sense. For the resolution further declares the State of Maryland owes it to her own self-respect to announce her resolute determination to have no part or lot, directly or indirectly, in the prosecution.

Mark the reasoning of the report adds to the significance of the resolution, for it maintains that, if, as the Governor thinks, the Constitution is still over your State and General Government, "then the State of Maryland can hold no neutrality when the Union is at war!! She takes sides against it the instant she fails to take sides with it. Neutrality in such a case is nullification, pure and simple, and an armed neutrality is merely rebellion, and not union." Differing from the Governor, however, "the Committee have no hesitation in asserting and maintaining the right of the State, and its duty, to protest against the unconstitutional action of the Administration, and refuse obedience to its unconstitutional demands," that action being its war on the rebellious States, those demands being for troops from Maryland. That is "nullification" and "rebellion" by the confession of the report formally declared by both Houses of the Legislature.

Still, the report proceeds further to say: "The present and only possible attitude of the State toward the Federal Government is an attitude of submission, unwilling and galling submission, on the part of those who think and feel" as the Committee manifestly do.

Is it frivolous to pretend that the Legislature had abandoned the purpose of calling a sovereign Convention; they merely wanted the removal of the Federal ban to clothe actual rebellion with the forms of popular sanction by calling a Convention to amend the Constitution. When they met on the 4th of June, they felt the "Federal ban" still on them, and adjourned from the 25th of June till the 20th.

When they again met, the "Federal ban" was still on them; but in the meantime their confederate, KANE, had been arrested by Gen. BANKS; the Police Commissioners had delivered the City of Baltimore to anarchy, and had been arrested—using men in arms, commanding armed men who had levied war on the United States. A Joint Committee of both Houses, on the 5th of August, presented a report, which left nothing for a sovereign Convention to do, and resolutions which pronounced the destruction of the bonds of the State and Federal Governments; for, with full knowledge of the conduct of the Police Board above detailed, which they had screened by a bill of indemnity, the Legislature of Maryland on the 7th of August solemnly declared the arrest of CHARLES HOWARD, WILLIAM H. GATCHELL and JOHN W. DAVIS to have been made "under fictitious and arbitrary pretexts, a criminal violation of the plainest and dearest rights to which American citizens are born; and pronounced those arrests "in their bearing on the military and constitutional powers and privileges of the State A REVOLUTIONARY SUBVERSION of the Federal compact."

They dared do no more, for the "Federal ban" was still on them; but they adjourned on that day to the 14th of September, not without hope that the disaster of Bull Run might ere that day remove the "Federal ban," and allow them safely to end that "unwilling and galling submission," in accordance with their frequently avowed purpose and their penitent efforts.

Before that day you were arrested!

The only circumstance which could justify the President in permitting the assembling of such a body—which had already waged war against the United States, asserted the revolutionary subversion of the Constitution, and avowedly adjourned from time to time to await the removal of the "Federal ban" that it might more formally array the State in arms against the Government—would have been its entire insignificance or the distinguished loyalty the people of Maryland and exhibited in the elections and in raising troops. These were considerations of policy, and I am not inclined to question the President's judgment.

But the arrest was rigidly legal and in the forms of law; for Congress had authorized the President to use military power to suppress the rebellion, and he might lawfully seize any one engaged in it, or whom he might have reasonable reason to believe engaged in it.

The Joint Committee of the Legislature, of which you were one, declare that "the true and only loyalty of a free people consists in their reverence for the laws and Constitution, and their obedience to the tribunals by which they are expounded." I cheerfully concur in that definition; and those tribunals of the highest resort have declared the law as I have stated it.

The Supreme Court, by the mouth of Chief Justice TANEY, has decided that where the established Government has resorted to the rights and usages of war to maintain itself and to overcome unlawful opposition, "the officers engaged in its military service might lawfully arrest any one who, from the information before them, they had reasonable grounds to believe was engaged in the insurrection, and might order a house to be forcibly entered and searched, where there was reasonable grounds for supposing he might be concealed."

And Chief Justice MARSHALL, in the same Court, has said, if war be actually levied—that is, if a body of men be actually assembled for treasonable purposes—all those who perform any part, however minute, or however remote from the scene of action, and who are actually leagued in the general conspiracy, are to be considered as traitors.

The part the Legislature of Maryland performed in the war levied in Maryland, and Virginia and the South, was neither minute nor remote; and they exposed themselves to something more than mere arrest.

Of the indignities and indecencies inflicted on you, I know nothing; if they existed, they are to be greatly regretted; but, they hardly equaled those heaped by your confederates on the soldiers of the Union.

I have confined myself to designating the acts of the Legislature and their confederates, which justify the President in treating them as public enemies. I am ignorant of the opinions which you protest against being considered to have changed; nor are they material. No opinion is criminal under our law; even purposes unaccompanied by some attempt at execution, however criminal morally, are legally innocent; but acts of war are the objects of military suppression; and such were the acts of the Legislature of Maryland.

I regret to be obliged to admit that some arrests have been made by an abuse of military power; you are not more sensitive to these wrongs than I am, and I have striven to redress or prevent them; but, Sir, you must pardon me for saying that your arrest is not one of that character.

Respectfully your ob't serv't,

JOHN SHERMAN.

New-Year's Day.

From present indications we may prophecy that New-Year's day will be more seasonably unpleasant than was Christmas. The air is chilled, the wind is more keen, and we would do well to prepare for wet pavements and a dampish atmosphere.

Money seems abundant. Everybody has piles of greenbacks with which they purchase presents for their friends, and we learn from TIFFANY, where costly jewelry and articles of vertu are bought; from TAYLOR, where choice delicacies for our New-Year's tables, and fancy bon-bons for our children's stockings may be found; from BALLOU, whose shirts fit closer than a brother sticketh; from this house and that dealing in all manner of trinkets and toys; from GOUPIL and SCHAUS, from BALL, BLACK & Co., and MALLORY; from MASON, whose pure wines sparkle like diamonds; from one and all, that never, never did they lay in such a large stock as on this year, that never have prices ranged so high, and that never have the goods gone off with such rapidity, and never have the people been so anxious for more.

Our advertising columns teem with notices of holiday wares, and we, without particularizing, would call the attention of those to them who are in need of pretty playthings, sweet confection, dainty decorations for the approaching New-Year's, or the things of life more solid.

Preparations for the social remembrance of the New Year are more than ordinarily active. The City and County will, with accustomed liberality, provide feasts of good things for the poor under their supervision and in their charge, and we know of no good reason why, as a City, New-York should not reasonably expect, to-morrow, a Happy New-Year.

THE CHARITABLE FUND.—A sale of valuable gift-paintings for the benefit of the charitable fund at this City, is to take place this day at 11 o'clock, at the galleries of Messrs. Leeds & Co., No. 22 Maiden-lane.

SALE OF OIL-PAINTINGS.—At the Gallery of the Institute of the Fine Arts, No. 625 Broadway, Messrs. D. W. Ives & Co. sold at auction a collection of oil-paintings. Among the artists represented were Church, Hart, Rondel, Van Boost, Inman, Hoving, of London, and others. The prices fetched were not large; the highest being $235 for the "Passage of the Red Sea," by SCHAUS; and the lowest, $3 for a landscape by RUGELES.

WHERE ARE YOU GOING?—This is a simple question, yet for once it bothered me entirely. I had always been accustomed to telling my wife everything, but on this occasion I wished my destination to be kept secret from her. The truth was, I was going out to select for her a New Year's present. I am no great judge of woman's gear, but, riding around the Central Park, the other day, (we always ride around every day as long as the pleasant weather lasts,) she commented of the cold, and incidentally (perhaps intentionally) mentioned what a beautiful Arctic robe Mr. Kerr Flamberry had bought of Knox for his wife. "What Knox?" said I. "Not my hatter?" "Yes, indeed," said my wife; "the very self-same person, for Mr. Kerr Flamberry said his fur robes were as nice as his hats." So on this hint I determined to buy my wife a genuine Arctic robe—a splendid affair, silvery white, tufted and bordered. I had noticed them at Knox's place, corner of Broadway and Fulton-st., on my way to business, and thought them the very thing for a stylish winter turnout, as we need not worry that my wife's inclinations had taken that direction. Under these circumstances, the question of "Where are you going?" struck me all of a heap, and I answered at random that I was going to see a sick friend, and made my exit as quick as possible. Wife looked as if she knew I was telling a lie, but I secured the robe at any rate—the handsomest in town, except a few more of the same sort which Knox has left; and to further my peace, I bought her a skating set—hood and collar—just as good to ride in, and now I am as anxiously waiting as any child for New-Year's morning.
